Part 1: Fixing no-shows

The problem

One in four clients does not come, and she finds out only when she is sitting there waiting. I think most people forget, or their plans change and they feel awkward to tell her. So I would remind them early, make it easy to cancel or move the visit, and let her know early.

What I would do

1. Send a WhatsApp reminder. She already uses WhatsApp and clients read it. I would send one message the day before and one a few hours before, with the date and time. This fixes simple forgetting.

2. Ask the client to confirm. The client taps "I will be there" or replies YES. If someone has not confirmed by the evening before, she knows in advance and not when she is waiting in the room.

3. Make moving a visit easy. Every reminder has a link to pick a new time. People skip a visit when changing it feels awkward. A free slot can then go to someone else.

4. Show her who has not confirmed. A short list of tomorrow's clients who have not replied. She can message them or fill the slot.

5. Watch repeat no-shows. If the same client misses again and again, ask for a small advance that is given back when they come. This only affects the few people who cause the problem.

Where I would start

I would start with steps 1 to 4. They cost nothing and need no payment setup. I would count the no-shows for one month. If the number is still high, I would add step 5.

In my app (Part 2) there is an "I will be there" button for the client, a WhatsApp reminder button for her, and a no-show rate on her dashboard.
